

THE GREEN PARTY

Sex, golf and rock-'n'-roll—what a concept! Now in its second year, the San-Francisco-based Schwimg! manages to make golf look cool. The otherwise bland sport is dressed up with babes and rockers like j.

Musica and Incubus, all heaving up and getting down in 80 fairly slick pages.

The Minter 2000 issue (Vol. 2, No. 4) was filled with funny headlines, like "America's Most Course," "Sig. It, Rip It and Grip It" (about a trick shot using a beer can for a tee) and "'15th Hole" (a last-page babe photo). Reviews of tournaments, CDs and books ran side by side with articles on night golf, stoner caddy Ed Fitzpatrick (known on the green as a "looper") and streakers at the British Open. Not one word is devoted to Tiger Woods.

Improvement in the art direction and Schwimg! will become a must-have for geebie golfers the world 'round.

TWENTY YEARS OF EARTH FIRST!

The American radical environmental struggle has long been chronicled in the pages of Earth First!. The Nov.-Dec. 2000 issue celebrated the venerable publication's 20th anniversary.

Starting with a reprint of the first page of the original Nov. '80 newsletter, Earth First!'s mission was clear: "We will not make political compromises. Let other outfits do that. Earth First! [without the trademark exclamation point] will set forth the pure, hard-line, radical position of those who believe in the Earth First!." The 114-page black-and-white, ad-free, perfect-bound issue features numerous reprints from earlier editions, book excerpts and historical retrospectives, such as Kris Haver's "The Life and Times of Our Beloved Journalist—A Not-So-Brief History."

To subscribe, send $25 for eight issues to: Daily Planet Publishing, PO Box 1415, Eugene, OR 97440.

MENU FOR THE HEMPSTER

Getting high isn't the only thing you can do with the cannabis plant. Hemp can do all kinds of wonderful things for our modern world—replace wood pulp, provide fiber, serve as a source for building materials. However, one of the most ancient uses for the hempseed is food. Hempseed is packed with digestible proteins and essential fatty acids, and is low in unsaturated fats. In short, many nutritionists call it nature's most perfect food.

So how do you cook with it? Check out The Hemp Cookbook (Healing Arts Press) by Todd Dalcroft. It contains everything you need to know about the hempseed and furnishes tons of healthy recipes to get you started on your hemp diet. There are cookies, sandwich spreads, toppings and a variety of flavored hemp-milk recipes to choose from. Plus, there are helpful essays concerning the state of hemp in America.

KEY TO SUCCESS

At a recent photo shoot, rapper XZIBIT showed up with all the proper tools to make it to the top—or at least to get very high. He happens to be one of the hottest new rappers on the hip-hop scene. Everybody's into this dude. Rolling Stone and The Source have already featured stories on XZIBIT and his new album, Restless. Figures to cause a huge sensation.

Here XZIBIT checks out the props before cranking up the publicity machine. We're sure success won't go to his head. Some terrific herb got there first.

PFWOOD! THERE IT IS!

Many smokers claim that once they sampled the pleasures of a waterpipe, their entire world changed. What a high! What a feeling! What a high feeling! And so forth. But it's awfully risky traveling the world with an expensive glass piece in your luggage. What's a bong lover to do? Well, why not try the pfwood?

You heard right. That's the name of the newest innovation in bongz. The pfwood can't break into a zillion sharp pieces because it's fully inflatable. When you're ready to smoke, all you have to do is use some of the prodigious lungpower that you've already developed. Blow the pfwood up, fill it with water, insert the stem and bowl, and in no time you'll be ready for takeoff. When you're finished, fold it up into the flat, wallet-sized carrying case that comes with the pfwood.

Travel smart and keep your prized possessions safe at home. A word of caution, though: If you get too high and miss the bowl with your lighter, expect a meltdown. Website: pfwood.com

POT LIT. 101

Once you get high, the age-old question always pops up: What do you do now?

Watch TV? Nah. Over 150 channels and there's never anything on. Do housework? Tomorrow, maybe. Exercise? Are you kidding? How about reading? Reading! Now there's a concept. And we have the perfect book for you. It's called Get Stoned And Read this book.

If the title doesn't grab you, then obviously you're not stoned enough because this volume is tailored to the higher state of mind. It's a compilation of photography, graphic design and stoner-speak that ditches the pot-saturated brain with random images that are somehow familiar to all of us. A pebblesack on a dark beach lights up surreptitiously. A dog offers his full spectrum of facial expressions. There are loads of pot shots and textured close-ups of paraphernalia. There's poetry, tea—and obscure doggerel that will make every pothead ponder the elusiveness of reality. Every page is different. Just like every high! Our sage advice: Get stoned and read Get Stoned And Read This Book.
